POST NOMINATION OPINION POLL REPORT

"Assessing the opinions and perceptions of voting-age Ugandans on the 2016 general elections"

RESEARCH WORLD INTERNATIONAL LTD
P.O. BOX 34148, KAMPALA, UGANDA.

January – 2016

Background Information to the 2015 Opinion Poll

- NTV Uganda & Uganda Governance Monitoring platform partnered with RWI to conduct a national representative public opinion poll with the aim of assessing the opinions and perceptions of voting-age Ugandans on the 2016 general elections.
- Field work was conducted between-19th December 2015 – 10th January 2016.
- Field work was done in 89 districts with a total sample of 2,685 of registered voters of 18 Yrs and above.
- Results are given with a +/-5% margin of error at a 95% confidence level
- The report provides for regional, age group specific, gender, and in some cases political affiliations.
- The report therefore represents opinions of between 19th December 2015 – 10th January 2016 when the field work was conducted.
- Further analysis by religion, ethnicity can be requested from the RWI team

Methodological Challenges in Conducting opinion polls

- From our experience, we realize that the process of opinion polling often appears mysterious, particularly to those who don't see how the views of few people can represent those of hundreds of millions. …Many people would ask;
  - How the poll results can differ so much from their own personal impressions of what people think;
  - Ask how the poll star (RWI) selects people for inclusion in its polls; and
  - To find out why they have never been interviewed.
- The public's questions indicate a sincere desire to find out more about how polling is conducted, which becomes a vital area for consideration at the point of dissemination of results to enhance understanding and believability. This shows that the process of conducting the polls is as good as the results themselves.

The Strategic Purpose of the 2015 Opinion Poll

- The strategic purpose of the survey was to understand public opinions and perceptions on 2016 general election with the purpose of directing public debates about the general elections.

Description of Methodology

- RWI designed and implemented a quantitative national public opinion survey with both open and closed end questions to measure public perceptions and opinions.
- In developing the methodological strategies, we drew upon a number of existing sources such as governance and social surveys, in particular gallop, Afro barometer, Pew Global Attitudes Project, and the World Values Survey, as our reference points.
- For this opinion polling, we used the parish as the sampling point, or the smallest cell for data collection. In each parish/division no more than 15 respondents were interviewed and this allowed us to spread and disperse the sample over 89 districts.

Sampling Processes

- RWI applied a probability sampling which is by any standard regarded as the fundamental basis for all survey research of this nature.
- The fundamental goal of our surveys was to come up with the same results that would have been obtained had every member of a population of 18+ been interviewed.
- The key used to reach this objective was a fundamental principle called equal probability of selection, which gave every member of a population an equal – or in some instances a known -- probability of being selected in a sample, making the sample representative of the population.

Selection of the Household

- A household is defined as a group of persons who live together in the same homestead/compound but not necessarily in the same dwelling unit, have common housekeeping arrangements, share the same household head, and regularly share meals together
- The random start method was adopted during selection of households. A fixed landmark within the boundaries of the selected ward (such as a school or church) and (following the left hand rule) proceed to the starting household which is determined by the date of interview.
- The number of sampling points to be surveyed in each region was determined by the sample size allocated to that region, which was allocated on the basis of proportionate to population size (PPS).

Selection of the Respondents

- At the household, the respondent to be interviewed was selected using the Kish Grid. All members of the household aged 18 and over were listed in the household schedule on the KISH GRID.
- Following a successful interview at the household, the enumerator skipped four houses and selected the fifth(households).
- If the selected respondent was not at home, the enumerator made 2 call backs in a span of two days and a follow up to a place of work for those whose households had been selected but not at home. This was the case with Kampala where most interviews were done on the weekends and evenings.
