OPINION POLLS

What's a public opinion poll?

- ❑ Public opinion poll is a type of survey or inquiry designed to measure the public's views regarding particular topics or series of topics and the respondents are randomly chosen from the population being measured.
- ❑ Opinion polls can indeed guide in directing the discussions around governance, democracy, election related issues and any other issue under public debate. Opinion poll therefore make a significant contribution in providing an understanding of public opinion by revealing key drivers behind their opinion and attitudes and the likely choices.
- ❑ It is important to note that opinions shift.

Methodological Challenges in Conducting Polls

- ❑ From our experience, we realize that the process of opinion polling often appears mysterious, particularly to those who don't see how the views of few people can represent those of hundreds of millions.
- ❑ Many people will ask;
 - ✓ How the poll results can differ so much from their own personal impressions of what people think;
 - ✓ How did the poll star (RWI) selects people for inclusion in its polls
 - ✓ How come they have never been interviewed?
- ❑ The public's questions indicate a sincere desire to find out more about how polling is conducted, which becomes a vital area for consideration at the point of dissemination of results to enhance understanding and believability. This shows that the process of conducting the polls is as good as the results themselves.

Strategic objective

The strategic purpose of the survey was to measure public opinions and perceptions on the social economic and political aspects in Uganda”

Data Collection Steps (Step 1-4)

- Step 1: At each sampling point, enumerators picked recognizable landmarks, such as a trading centre, school or mosque, as the starting point of the survey.
- Step 2: At the point the enumerators selected one household and then picked one adult aged 18 years and above to interview using the Kish grid
- Step 3: The enumerators sought informed consent and asked the respondents to sign the inform consent form - if they agreed to participate in the study.
- Step 4: After the consenting process, the enumerators thanked the respondents who refused to participate and left the household but documented that.

- Step 4: The enumerators maintained the left hand side until they reached the end of the sampled area. They did not come back to the starting point unless they were using the opposite side of where they started.
- Step 6: The enumerators did this up to when they had all the required interviews from each of the catchment area.
- Step 7: All enumerators observed all the ethical norms i.e. honesty, objectivity, legality, human subjects' protection, carefulness and confidentiality among others.
